Planning School Places for Bromley

No shortage of good school places in Bromley

Bromley has enough school places to meet demand with high numbers getting their preferred choices in good and outstanding schools.

As the population has grown, London and the country as a whole has seen pressure on school places with rising demand posing extreme challenges to local authorities to fulfil their duty to provide sufficient places.

We review the situation annually, taking into account data about birth rates and movement into and out of the borough, as well as the expected geographical spread of young people to make recommendations about the numbers of places that will be needed.

It's a well defined process that has provided sufficient school places year after year despite significant rises in demand.

Now we would like to widen the School Place Planning debate and invite parents, parents-to-be and everyone interested to meet our experts in the field.
